while caring about the real needs of patients.

Through this approach, we are able to develop innovative medical solutions that only we can provide.

Chairman of the Board of Directors

Kotaro Fukuda

The development of the first electrocardiograph in Japan was the first step for Fukuda Denshi. Since then, Fukuda Denshi has contributed to the advancement of medical science, while also meeting the demands of social reform and continuously combining the growth of technology with the power of the human element. Fukuda Denshi, a manufacturer specializing in medical devices, continues to face challenges based on our more than 80-year history. With the trust of society, we will continue to develop medical innovations that contribute to health of humanity.

President and Representative Director

Daijiro Shirai

It's crucial that people trust us as a manufacturer of medical devices. This, in our opinion, is built through experiencing the quality of each and every one of our products and how beneficial they are for patient health. Fukuda Denshi will carry on being an innovator and a challenger who can meet with societal changes and expectations. By finding the actual needs for the medical environment, we will strive to be a "Centennial Company", while making a positive impact on the progress in medical science.

Since its establishment in 1939, the Fukuda Group has progressed continuously with the advancement of medical technology in Japan. Medical devices and systems have become more sophisticated and complex over time, but one thing has remained unchanged.

That is, the founding principle of "Customer First".

The trust that the Fukuda Group has gained from its customers has come from this spirit and attitude, and it still permeates our business today. We will continue to move ahead as a company that is dedicated to our social mission and contributes to the advancement of medical science and human health through our medical devices.
